ASSISTANT PROFESSOR IN IMPLEMENTATION SCIENCE

The Sanford School of Social and Family Dynamics (SSFD: https://thesanfordschool.asu.edu/) announces a search for a tenure-track position aimed at building on SSFD’s existing strengths in innovative and interdisciplinary research focused on children, youth, and families. We invite applications for a full-time, tenure-track Assistant Professor position with a focus on Implementation Science with an anticipated start date of Fall 2016 (job number 11409). The successful candidate will be expected to deliver instruction consistent with the mission of the unit, conduct quality publishable research, and advance the unit, institution, and profession through engaged service. Successful candidates must have a PhD or equivalent by time of appointment in human development, psychology, education, health, sociology, or a related field. Candidates must also have an accomplished record of publications regarding factors that promote or impede the implementation, fidelity, efficacy, and/or dissemination of interventions designed to improve outcomes for children, youth, and families. Demonstrated excellence in teaching also is required. Preferred qualifications include experience working in interdisciplinary settings, a demonstrated understanding of the dynamics involved in effective social-emotional-behavioral school-based programs, and demonstrated potential for successful external funding.

Initial deadline for receipt of complete applications is January 22, 2016; if not filled, review of applications will continue every week thereafter until the search is closed. Electronic submission of materials is required. Electronically send a letter of application describing your research; teaching background and interests; curriculum vitae, contact information for three references; and two samples of written work to Dr. Marilyn Thompson at ssfdmethods@gmail.com. A background check is required for employment.
